Capital Transmission participates in the acquisition of Condis, a world leader in the production and development of high-voltage products and solutions

Capital Transmission assisted Renaissance PME foundation in the acquisition of CONDIS from the American group Maxwell Technologies. The operation was carried out alongside the company's management.

CONDIS is a world leader in the production and development of high-voltage products and solutions for public utility infrastructures. CONDIS is located in Rossens in the canton of Fribourg with a representative office in Shanghai. CONDIS works closely with its customers and partners to develop new solutions in the fields of high voltage capacitors, metering, communication, HVDC (High Voltage Direct Current) and services. The key challenges for CONDIS to help improve networks and make them safer will be digitisation, increased energy and reliable infrastructure. Contributing to the reduction of the carbon footprint will also be a major challenge for the company and its management.

This Management Buy-Out operation strengthens the company's position in its historic headquarters in Rossens in the canton of Fribourg. As such, the company will revert to its original name CONDIS. The next few years will be dedicated to the development of new products in order to have a portfolio of solutions adapted to the constantly changing electricity market.
